

Examine the document below and answer the question that follows.

PRESENTED BY BANK OF AMERICA

Andrew Plepler

Global Corporate Social Responsibility and Consumer Policy
Executive, Bank of America ®

Do Millennials Have Good Money Habits?

This article argues that many millennials (people in their mid-20s to mid-30s) need help with financial planning. What is one reason you might not trust this article?

“Stanford University’s study of students and online news asked middle schoolers to give reasons they might not trust the article by a Bank of America executive on financial planning. Almost 70% of 200 students didn’t mention the authorship as a reason for mistrust. A sample [incorrect] response was ‘I wouldn’t trust it because some millennials do have good money habits.’”

*from Most Students Don’t Know When News Is Fake, Stanford Study Finds

*by Sue Shellenbarger Nov. 21, 2016 *The Wall Street Journal

Photo Credit: Stanford History Education Group

The following tweets appeared on March 11, 2015.

The Subject @handsupunited_ · 5h
#Ferguson Police Chief Resigns! #ShutItDown

Lisa Bloom @LisaBloom · 5h
#Ferguson police chief steps down, to be replaced by an interim chief from the same police department DOJ found is riddled with racial bias.

NPR News @nprnews · 6h
#Ferguson police chief's resignation is effective March 19 via @MilesParks
@nprnews: n.pr/1E6zF4j

Bassem Masri @bassem_masri · 7h
Supposedly Chief Jackson is resigning today but we will have more info later
#Ferguson

Which tweet is the best source of information about the police chief's resignation? Explain why.

“Stanford University’s study of students and online news asked middle schoolers which of the four tweets, above, were the most trustworthy. More than half of the 204 students trusted Lisa Bloom’s tweet more than the one from NPR, noting that the Bloom tweet had the most information. A sample student [incorrect] response was ‘The best tweet for information is the first one because it actually shows him resigning in a picture, and it gives a caption saying that he is resigning.’”

*from Most Students Don't Know When News Is Fake, Stanford Study Finds
by Sue Shellenbarger Nov. 21, 2016 The Wall Street Journal
Photo Credit: Stanford History Education Group

 Search

Displaying results for year-round school

We need year-round schools

⌚ 4:42 PM, Aug 31, 2012 | OPINIONS

Melissa Davis says students lose the gains they made in school during summer vacation and do much better with year-round schools.

Despite push, year-round schools get mixed grades

⌚ 12:00 AM, Sep 04, 2012 | NEWS

As students head back to class across the United States, educators are weighing the benefits of a longer school year, which has been tried in several districts with mixed results.

“Stanford University’s study of students and online news asked middle-school students which of the items above would they read to learn the facts. More than 60% of the 200 respondents either chose the opinion piece or failed to give clear reasons why they chose the news story. A sample [incorrect] response was ‘I would not survive if we had year-round schools. Kids need a break at some point...’”

from Most Students Don't Know When News Is Fake, Stanford Study Finds

by Sue Shellenbarger Nov. 21, 2016 The Wall Street Journal

Photo Credit: Stanford History Education Group